INTRODUCTION

This collection primarily focuses on the business and civic dealings of Joseph Martin. It contains material on most aspects of his life, especially his involvement with aviation and Meyer's Department Store. He was also involved with numerous community organizations as seen in materials from many local groups, such as the Chamber of Commerce.

Arrangement: This collection is arranged into five series basically as Joseph Martin had organized it. Within series, materials are arranged into subseries by document type, and each subseries is organized alphabetically. The series are: Greensboro-High Point Airport, 1937-1982; Hawks, Frank, 1935-1965; Meyer's Department Store, 1930-1978; Personal, 1918-1973; and Rickenbacker, Eddie, 1941-1968. Three books were removed from the collection and placed in the Rare Books Collection. They are: The New 1949 Aircraft Year Book, published and edited by Lincoln Press Inc. (signed by Congressman Carl Durham); Fifty Years of Flight: A Chronicle of the Aviation Industry in America, 1903-1953, by Welman A. Shrader, (signed by Congressman Durham); and From Father to Son: the Letters of Captain Eddie Rickenbacker to his son William, from boyhood to manhood, by William Rickenbacker (signed by both William and his father Eddie).

Provenance: This collection was donated by Elizabeth Stahl, who was executor for the estate of Joseph Martin's second wife. It was assigned the accession number 1990.33.1. The materials in the collection were either created or collected by Joseph Martin.

Processing: This collection was organized and the finding aid was prepared by Robert M. Browning in February and March 1996.

BIOGRAPHICAL NOTE

Joseph Martin (1896-1973) was one of Greensboro's most prominent businessmen during the middle decades of the twentieth century. He led Meyer's Department Store to become one of the most successful retail businesses in all of the South. He was also one of the fathers of commercial air travel in Greensboro, as he pushed for the expansion of the Greensboro-High Point Airport, providing leadership that allowed it to become one of the largest airports in North Carolina. He was the first president of the Airport Authority, a post he held until the mid-1960s. Martin was also involved with numerous civic and charitable organizations in and around Greensboro. He was one of the people who helped to bring a professional golf tournament to Greensboro (the Greater Greensboro Open), and he led other organizations such as the Chamber of Commerce and the local Community Chest.

SCOPE & CONTENT NOTE

This collection includes correspondence, scrapbooks, photographs, legal documents, pamphlets, reports, flyers, posters, programs, statistics, and newspaper clippings.

Researchers will find this collection particularly strong on local aviation history (Series 1). Materials on the beginning, subsequent development, and expansion of the Greensboro-High Point Airport are some of the most useful the collection has to offer. Also of interest is a large group of material on Meyer's Department Store (Series 3), one of the largest and most successful retail businesses in Greensboro during the middle portion of the twentieth century. The personal material (Series 4) contains numerous items largely related to Joseph Martin's civic activities.

SERIES DESCRIPTIONS

1. Greensboro-High Point Airport. 94 folders (ca. 225 items). 1937-1982.

This series consists of several subseries and relates to Joseph Martin's involvement with the development and expansion of Greensboro's airport. The subseries correspondence (1:1-29) primarily concerns the Greensboro-High Point Airport Authority, which Martin chaired. One issue appearing often was the question of whether to include Winston-Salem as a partner in the airport. Of particular note are correspondence with several prominent Greensboro business and civic leaders such as J. Spencer Love of Burlington Industries (1:15), Ceasar Cone of Cone Mills (1:4-7), and C.M. "Neil" Vanstory of North Carolina National Bank (1:28). Of further interest are letters from U.S. Congressman Carl Durham (1:9) and North Carolina Governor Luther Hodges (1:12).

The financial subseries contains some miscellaneous ledgers and notes (1:31, 32). A comparative study between the Raleigh-Durham Airport (1:30) and the Greensboro-High Point Airport provides insight into how air travel was expanding in the state during the 1960s.

Joseph Martin carefully documented a lawsuit pitting the Greensboro-High Point Airport against the United States. These materials contain correspondence (1:36-49), legal documents (1:50-53), and some printed material (1:54-56). The major issues in the suit revolved around the Greensboro group, led by Martin, attempting to have the government accept responsibility and pay for damages at the airport caused by the U.S. Army during World War II.

A large amount of printed material (1:59-93) concerning the airport, its history, and its operation is also present. Numerous yearly reports (1:78-84) provide insight into how the Authority ran the airport and planned for its future. Also of interest is an appraisal (1:59) that is accompanied by several drawings detailing possible expansion plans for the airport as it grew. Researchers interested in the historical aspects of the airport will find several of the pamphlets

(1:70-71) and programs (1:76-77) useful and enlightening. The miscellaneous newspaper clippings (1:69) also contain historical information on the airport and its beginnings.

NOTE: For additional information on the Greensboro-High Point Airport, see Mss. Coll. #43 (Greensboro-High Point Airport Collection), and Mss. Coll. #110 (John R. Larsen Collection), which contains information on Eastern Airlines and its involvement at the airport. Prior to being called the Greensboro-High Point Airport, the location was named Lindley Field. Mss. Coll. #99 (Lindley Field History Collection) contains reference material and a graduate thesis by William Decker about Lindley Field.

2. Hawks, Frank. 9 folders (ca. 20 items). 1935-1965.

Frank Hawks (1897-1938) was a member of the U.S. air service from 1917-1919 and set numerous speed records for transcontinental flights. He was also a close friend of Joseph Martin. This small series consists of a bill/receipt (2:1), correspondence (2:2-8), and printed material (2:9). The majority of the items are from the mid to late 1930s and revolve around Hawks, who planned to fly around the world. Much of the correspondence concerns securing funding and sponsors for the flight. One letter of note is to Mary Nicholson (2:6), a female pilot from Greensboro and member of the women's aviatress group the Ninety-Nines. Nicholson died in a plane crash transporting a plane for the English during World War II.

3. Meyer's Department Store. 19 folders (ca. 115 items). 1930-1978.

The bulk of this series consists of printed material relating to Meyer's Department Store, of which Joseph Martin was president from 1930 to 1961. Of particular interest are photographs (3:4-5) detailing several marketing strategies, and a fashion show.

The printed material (3:6-19), however, provides the most information on this retail establishment that became one of the most successful businesses in Greensboro. Several advertisements (3:6), a booklet (3:7), catalogs (3:8), and newspaper clippings (3:13-14) provide glimpses into the kind of merchandise Meyer's sold, the layout of the store, and how it expanded into more spacious quarters. Indeed, Meyer's became so successful that several magazine articles (3:10-12) were published in trade journals hailing it as one of the prominent retail establishments in the South.

More printed material surrounding actress Gloria Swanson's fashion show (3:19) at Meyer's in 1952 might be useful for researchers interested in such events and other marketing schemes used by department stores. The collection has script notes and programs listing the schedule of the events for the show.

Historians who have concentrated on department stores and their importance to society (in labor, and how society has transformed over the course of the twentieth century) have largely focused on establishments in the Northeast and Midwest. These materials give a glimpse of what was happening in department stores in a moderately-sized city in the South.

4. Personal. 42 folders (ca. 70 items). 1918-1973.

Much of the material in this series consists of biographical data on Joseph Martin and relates to many of his civic activities. A comprehensive biography (4:1) of his life and accomplishments is an excellent place to start for researchers who are interested in his life. Also of note are several certificates (4:22-24), and newspaper clippings (4:2) that shed further light on his life.

The correspondence (4:3-16) in this series is largely personal but includes some information on Joseph Martin's activities away from Meyer's and the airport. Of particular note is a letter from Branch Rickey (4:11) concerning professional baseball in Greensboro. Rickey would later sign Jackie Robinson, making him the first African American to play in the major leagues in the twentieth century. Other correspondents of note are Wallace Wade (4:15) of Duke University and Joseph Bryan (4:3) of Jefferson Standard Life Insurance Co.

The printed material (4:19-42) within this series largely focuses on Joseph Martin's civic activities. Materials from the Greensboro Chamber of Commerce (4:30-31, 36, 41), the Greensboro Community Chest (4:42), and the Greater Greensboro Open Golf Tournament (4:35) are particularly interesting. Also of note are materials relating to Tony Manero (4:27), a Greensboro resident who won the 1936 United States Golf Open Championship. Joseph Martin was largely responsible for organizing Manero's welcome back ceremonies upon his return.

5. Rickenbacker, Eddie. 5 folders (ca. 20 items). 1941-1968.

This small series consists of materials relating to Joseph Martin's friendship with Eddie Rickenbacker. It contains correspondence (5:1-2), photographs (5:3), and printed material (5:4-5). Rickenbacker was a World War I hero and fighter pilot. He became president of Eastern Airlines, one of the first major carriers to use the Greensboro-High Point Airport. The bulk of the material is personal in nature, especially the letters, which largely speak of politics.
